About Me: Background/Relevant Experience

I went to the University of California in San Diego to get my undergraduate degree and shortly after that, taught with Teach for America, serving New York City schools for almost seven years. I've taught elementary classes and middle school math and when I wasn't busy with work I was exploring the city, checking out musicals and searching for the best pizza and donuts in the five boroughs.

I hope to someday use my classroom experience to write children's books or young adult books.

What Do You Love About Working with Play-Well?

I love the emphasis Play-Well puts on STEM and the idea of teaching kids through what they are passionate about!

What Do You Love to Geek Out About?

I'm a huge board game and tabletop game geek. If it involves dice rolling, collecting game pieces, and taking copious notes, count me in! I'm also super interested in food – specifically trying out food from different cultures and cooking things from scratch. There's something very gratifying about being able to create something on your own out of a handful of ingredients.
